

100 hours options

Most activities involving direct instruction of one child or a small group of children will work, as long as the student has a supervisor who can provide training and support of the student and can evaluate the student's work. Excluded are self-employment situations (babysitting, nannying, hiring self out as tutor, etc.)

Examples:

Working in a summer school setting

Teacher's aide

Tutoring

Quest / after school programs

Summer camps of all kinds: scouts, church camps, sports, Rock Springs Ranch, etc.

Substitute teaching

Rule 10 coaching

Head Start

Sunday school / youth group / vacation Bible school

Child care centers (if they employ planned activities—not simply babysitting)

Summer recreation league coaching

Swimming lessons
