

Bearnard Writes A Book

by Deborah Underwood

Created by:

Gabriel Richardson & Vivian Tennyson

Book Summary

Bearnard the bear that wants to write a story about his best friend Gertie the goose. The only problem is that Bearnard does not know how to write a book. Together they go to Storybook Land where they learn about the elements of writing. Bearnard's book ends up on the library shelf! Gertie is now inspired to write poetry.

Read Aloud Questions

- Why did Bearnard want to write a book about Gertie?
- Have you ever written a story before?
- What do you think they might learn in Storybook Land?
- What would happen if Bearnard lost his way?
- How does reading help Bearnard?
- Do you think it was a good idea to choose the river? Why or why not?
- What changes might you make to Bearnards story?
- What might happen if Bernard did not take a thinking walk?
- What would you suggest Bearnard to add in his book?

Book Activity

Materials: brown paper plates, googly eyes, permanent markers, strips of paper, scraps of construction paper, glue.

Directions

1. Read the book aloud, stopping to discuss the parts of the writing process that Bearnard and Gertie find in Story Land.

2. After reading the story, hand out copies of the Story Elements graphic organizer. Reread parts of the story and stop to discuss the elements the author used to write the story. Students may draw or write the elements of the story in each of the boxes.
3. Use the graphic organizer to retell the story. The graphic organizer can also be used to allow the students an opportunity to plan and write their own story, just like Bearnard.
4. Students can share their stories with their group.
